Painting Fruit Trees for Protection Against Vermin.

Agricultural Editor:

Dear Sir—I was interested in an item in "Practical Fruit Grower" referring to you, and your experience in painting fruit trees, with lead and oil. We have about 500 peach, 1000 apple and about the creek, and the care of them is no small tiem, and would gladly learn from you, as to whether or no, trees in this lattude would be benefited by oil and paint, and as to how you know from experience the value of such traument. Am not skeptical, but it is such an innovation that I would like to know as much as possible concerning the treatment and results. Thanking you in advance of role, I Treatment M. A. S.

What Did the Woggle Bug Say?

Every reader of The Times-Dispatch will find himself or herself puzzling over this perplexing question after he has read the page in the Magazine Sec-tion devoted to the doings of the "Queer Visitors From the Marvelous Land of Oz."

The Woggle Bug, wise man of the party, undertakes to answer all questions for his comrades from Oz. He has to answer one each week. His answer is not printed. The reader is left to discover it. 'The pictures and descriptive matter make this comparatively easy to the active mind. Both the plattices and the story are guides to the solution of the problem, and the question admits of but one correct answer. The puzzles require only ordinary skill

TELLS STORY OF HIS LIFE

Schley's Autobiography Covers His Entire Naval Career.

THE BATTLE OF SANTIAGO

If Americans Had Been Defeated Would Have Been No Question About Who Was in Command.

been no wish to detract from the services of others, no desire to enter unkind, undignified or rude words of those may have differed in their views, but to set forth the facts and services of a life that has been clean in its devotion to home and to country and steady in its purpose, from youth to its meridian, in giving the best years to duty conscientiously done for all that is near and dear to man-honor, home, country. • • • Neither the lapse of time nor the change of circumstances has wrought any change of faith in the expression from the heart penned in those first moments of the great battle of July 3, 1898;

"'I am glad that I had an opportunity to contribute in the least to a victory that seems big enough for all of us." Such are the closing words in "Fortyave Years Under the Flag," by Rear-Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, U. S. N., which D. Appleton & Co. will publish in a few days. In these memoirs Admiral Schley describes his service in the navy from his appointment as acting midshipman in 1856 until his retirement. In all the book the word "I" does not appear except in the quotation that ends

The Admiral speaks of himself in the third person, but the reader does not endeavored to do the work set before him without fear of personal consequences." Schley will be best remembered by the Greely relief exedition and his part in the battle off Jantiago. He writes thus of the final rescue of Greely and his surviving companions after infinite difficulties:

"The Bear, followed closely by the thetis, arrived off the wreck camp cache abo t 10 P. M., and there found Lleutenant Gree, y and six of his compared in a tent which the violent gate had blown cow; over the party as they lay in tarif endeavored to do the work set before him in a tent which the violent gale had blown cow; over the party as they lay in tarty sleeping-bags. The other eighteen of his party had perished, some while seeking relief towar! Cape Isabelia; some drowned while sealing, some had starved to death. The graves of a number were on a little ridge hardly two hundred feet away.

"The condition of the survivors was desparate in the extreme, while the squalor of the camp as found was heartending and distressing. One of the whistle hiasis blown to recall the searchers, was heard in the camp, and Brainard and Long went out to the cliff overlooking itaue Sea to Larm what; I might mean. To their joy thep romise was real for not long afterward the heralded ships were in sight.

"The success of the relief ships in 1881 was made possible in the fullest measure by the officers and men, who shared the dangers and exposures with the commander, and who were willing to undergo any privation or to undertake any risk to reach and rescue the r imperilled countrymen.

any privation or to undertake any risk to reach and rescue the r imperilled countrymen.

"They did so with much credit to themselves and much renown to the navy and to the nation."

Admiral Schley deals with the battle of Santlago most exhaustively, and his book will confirm those who were his adherents in the lamer table controversy which followed it in their opin on that he did most to win the victory. A single extract will sufficiently indicate the admiral's tone in this part of the narrative:

"From a confidential document under the title. 'Execut ve C; Third Session, Fifty-fifth Congress,' a communication by Mr, Long respecting 'advancements in the navy,' it is seen that the commanderin-chief's movements in Siboney on that morning were under orders from the department to meet General Shafter. This order, then, furnishes an explanation of the commander-in-chief's signal and subsequent movements eastward on July 3d. It supplies, too, evidence of temporary assignment to a new duty, taking him on shore to the headquarters of the army. It fixes incontestably also the status of the commander of the second squadron as senior officer present in command before Santlago after Sampson's withdrawal, "If the battle here related had miscar-the commander of the second squadron as senior officer present in command before Santiago after Sampson's withdrawal,

"If the battle here related had miscarried, or 'if through mismanagement Cervera or any of his ships had escaped that day, there would have been no difficulty whatever about who was in command, or who would have had to bear the censure. It is as certain in that event that there would have been no effort to prove that the New York was within signal distance, no claim that it was a captains battle, nor any other of the sophistries that were invented in the aftermath of controversy about this great v ctory.

"No instance is recalled where great success was won in battle where every participant was not anxious to share in the glory, but no instance is remembered where any subordinate ever desired to share with his superior the odium of defeat. Santiago alone would be unkque as one of the world's great battles won without anybody being in command. If defeat had occurred the commander of the second squadron would have had to take his medicine just the same."

'Admiral Schley describes New York's same."

Admiral Schley describes New York's reception of Admiral Dewey in the summer of 1899, and welles:

"Upon invitation of the municipal authorities of the metropolis the writer assisted them in doing honor to that great American commander, who had been for over forty years his comrade in arms.

for over forty years his comrate in arms, "The route followed by this imposing parade was literally packed with people from, all parts of our country, who occut'ed byery available foot of the pay ments, steps, wind ws pn! pliffrems creeted at a number of points ileng this route. Those who were in this vast procession as it moved on to its destination appeared to be passing through a canyou of humanity.

"The tumultuous enthusiasm which distinguished the occasion as this corrego passed onward found expression in almost deafening applause. The shower of flowers from fair hands, beginning on Riverside Park, ended only at Washington Souare.

Riverside Park, ended only at Washington Square.

From Thirty-fifth Street and Fifth Ayenue to Madison Square a bombardment of flowers from houselops and windows, from doorsteps and pawments, kept up. How many of these fell in Dewey's carriage the writer could not know, but those which reached his own carriage literally filled it, almost snowing him under, as it were. The air seement to be filled with flowers, as if they were being rained down upon this vast procession."—New York World.
